

BEAUJOLAIS

BEAUJOLAIS

Beaujolais, like Burgundy or Bordeaux, is an area in which different wines are grown AND a name applied to the wines which can be confusing. There are ten different villages or crus in Beaujolais with differing characters and that does not include Beaujolais Nouveau now very much rarer than twenty years ago.

What does unite the crus is that they are all made from the same grape, the Gamay. This produces very fruity red wine meant in nearly all cases to be drunk young and often at its best served cool with its fruit unjammed. The last few vintages have all provided really tasty wines.

BEAUJOLAIS

RED

Beaujolais Villages, Domaine des Charmeuses, Fessy A

Henry Fessy is well known for his reliable Beaujolais and consistently produces a wine which is light, tasty and fruity.

Taste
Guide

Trade
Sales Price

£6.49

Brouilly, Domaine La Garenne B

One of the fullest Beaujolais, ripe and intense but fruity and refreshing.

B

£8.29

Fleurie, Cuvée la Roitelet, Fessy B

One of the most popular Beaujolais Crus, because it is all that Beaujolais should be, scented, fruity and easy to drink.

B

£8.75

Morgon, Didier Desvignes B

Fruity, juicy and more full bodied than many Beaujolais with a firmer finish and a bit more meat to it all round.

B

£10.45

Fleurie, Didier Desvignes B

If Morgon is meaty, Fleurie is delicate, delicious and delectably ripe.

B

£11.45