

90% of the wine produced in the U.S.A. comes from the state of California. Its climate is unique, consistently better than those Old World regions it still strives to emulate, but much less naturally arid than many of its New World competitors. That is why the 'New World' style of maximising up-front fruit can be said to have originated here. Robert Mondavi in the 1960s and 1970s created the trend for Californian Chardonnay and Cabernet Sauvignon then taken on by the huge names such as Gallo, Blossom Hill and Constellation as well as lots of small 'boutique' vineyards. There is plenty of good news from this area which is now the fourth largest wine producer in the world. Recent years have seen a surplus of supply of red and white juice which has helped with prices.

STATE WEST

This is another new exclusive range we have introduced so that customers can have an entry level choice of California's three most popular varietals as opposed to major brand names found in supermarkets and other off-trade outlets. The wines have all been excellently made and offer great value.

REDTREE

We have introduced this range of premium varietals in 2011 made by the impressive Californian winemaker Bob Broman at Cecchetti Racke Wine Company. These excellent wines have a modern presentation, are fresh and fruit driven and have a distinctive fresh and tasty appeal.

...that most drinkable liquid
redolent of summer, strawberries, raspberries and cream...
