We are delighted to support our local waters from Yorkshire and the North West of England in our selection, as well as offering Strathmore from Scotland and two extremely popular brands from Italy in San Pellegrino and Acqua Panna.

WILLOW

Willow has been legendary for its restorative qualities since the 1700s, first discovered by Augustinian Monks. As rain falls on Cartmel Fell the water travels through this layer picking up valuable Salicin on its journey. A substantial layer of limestone provides a natural filter and also endows Willow Water with its significant calcium and mineral content, this gives the source an exceptionally unique cool, crisp and refreshing taste.

STRATHMORE

The water comes from a well, bored through 400 million year old sandstone. It gets there by falling as rainfall on the hills and vales of Strathmore located in the Royal Burgh of Forfar on the east coast of Scotland. This eventually filters down into an aquifer, which runs all the way under the North Sea from Scotland to Norway. This whole process takes an incredible 50 years.
